BRITISH RAILWAY ACCIDENTS.

Creditable Record of the United Kingdom in the Matter of Casualties on the Rail.

there were but twenty-one passengers and nine employees, thirty persons in all, killed in railway accidents in Great Britain and Ireland-in collisious, derailments, and accidents One solitary Chinaman for opium of a similar nature beyond the control of the victims. Nearly nine hundred millions of passengers were The P. G. band gave the usual carried during that period. Three weekly concert on the Executive building grounds this morning. those at Thirsk, Bishopsgate, and Esholt, so that aside from these exceptional cases, only four passengers out of all the enormous numbers carried by the railways were killed through causes entirely be-yond their own control. The record for the previous year, 1891, is still better, for only five passengers of all the millions carried and fifteen employees were killed in such railway accidents in the United Kingdom. Indeed, in two years only since 1884 has the number of fatalities to passengers been greater than last year, and in each case the large increase was due to one or two great lisasters. The Armagh accident, for instance, ran the death roll of 1889 up from eight to eighty-eight, three accidents in all being responsible for the death record of that year. The Tay Bridge disaster made the number of passenger deaths in 1879 seventy-five instead of two. In only three or four accidents a year, perhaps, have passengers been killed on railways in the United Kingdom through causes for which they were in no way responsible. Ranking first among the countries of the world in the number of passengers carried, though third in the amount of mileage, these figures seem to sustain the claim made for the railway system of the United Kingdom, that it is the safest service in the world. The fur her claim, equally important if comparisons involving the question of efficiency are to be insti-tuted, that it is also the best service in the world may be successfully disputed by perhaps only one country, our own.

In Great Britain during last year there were 601 passengers and ninety-two employees injured in accidents of the nature described. There were twenty-eight collisions between passenger trains, or parts of passenger trains, by which eleven passengers and two employees were killed and 226 passengers and 19 employees were injured; forty-three collisions between passenger and freight trains, by which nine passengers and one employee were killed, and 193 passengers and twenty-four employees injured, and thirteen collisions between freight trains. The other casualties were occasioned by trains leaving the track, running in the wrong direction through misplaced switches, running into stations at too great speed, and accidents to machinery couplings, axles, and rolling stock. By other and general accidents on the steamer Claudine this afternoon for Maui: E. R. Hendry, Mrs. Gallagher, H. P. Baldwin, W. F. Pogue, Joe Dias, J. C. Crowder and Dassengers killed and 969 injured in the United Kingdom during the connected with railways, through the United Kingdom during the year. Thirty-one were killed and eighty-seven injured by falling between the cars and the station platforms while boarding or alighting from trains. Twenty-eight were killed and ten injured while crossing the tracks at stations. Other accidents arose from all sorts of minor causes. Of persons other than passengers or employees there were 467 killed on the railways during 1892. Seventy-seven persons were killed and twenty-one injured at grade crossings. 258 persons were killed and 121 injured while trespassing on the railway, and eighty-nine persons committed suicide on railways. Five hundred and twenty-five railway employees were killed and 2823 injurea during the year through other causes than collisions and accidents coming under the head first referred to. There are over 400,000 persons employed on railways in the United Kingdom, so that the proportion of fatalities is something like one in 700. Altogether there were 1130 persons killed and 1485 injured on railways in the United Kingdom in

On railways in the United States during the ten months of the present year 260 persons were killed and 841 injured by accidents to trains, collisions, derailments, and the like In 1891 790 persons were thus killed and 2685 injured; in 1890 the record under this head was 806 killed and 2812 injured. Altogether there were 6335 persons killed and 29,027 injured on railways in the United States during the year ending June 30, 1890; 5823 killed and 26,309 injured during 1889, and 5282 killed and 25,888 injured in the year 1888. The percentage of deaths among railway employees is twice as high in the United States as in Great Britain and Ireland. During 1890 one person was killed for every 306 employed on railways in the United States, and one injured for every 33 employed. To say this is worse than warfare is trite, but it is true. It may be that these respective statistics of the two countries are interesting only for inspection, and not for comparison. A great mass of differing circumstances would have to be considered in making any comparisons. But the interesting fact remains that the railways of the United Kingdom, with a service first class and comprehensive in every respect, carry more passengers and have fewer casualties than those of any other country. American paper.

Woman Takes Opium to Her Husband.

A native woman named Kelii was found guilty in the District Court this morning of having opium unlawfully in possession on Jan. 21, and sentenced to pay a fine of $50. Kelii visited the Oahu Jail, where her husband was a prisoner, on the date mentioned, carrying with her a bundle supposed to contain tobacco and other necessaries for his use The prison guard escorted the woman to the office and she handed the bundle over for inspection before giving it to the prisoner. When the guard opened the parcel he found Insee opium pressed into the to-bacco. The opium was shown to Kelii, but she did not seem to be embarrassed or put out. Jailor Low was called in, and the woman was brought to the Police Station. Kelii, in her defense, stated that on her way to jail a Chinaman called her and gave her the parcel to give the prisoner. She did not know that there was opium in the parcel, but understood it to contain tobacco Emma Trask corroborated only. the defendant's story.

How to Cure La Grippe. About a year ago I took a violent attack of is grippe. I coughed day and night for about six weeks; my wife then suggested that I try Chamberlaiu's Cough Remedy. At first I could see no difference, but still kept taking it, and soon found that it was what I needed. If I got no relief from one dose I took another, and it was only a few days until I was free from the cough. I think people in general ought to know the value of this remedy, and I take pleasure in acknowledging the benefit I have received from it.
